

My name is Kevin, and I am the district manager of the Laramie County Conservation District. Prior to becoming the manager in 2025, I was employed almost twenty years with the Wyoming Department of Environmental Quality as a Natural Resource Program Supervisor overseeing compliance and enforcement of statutory regulations pertaining to surface water discharges in Wyoming. I also served as a Board Supervisor (4 terms) for the Laramie County Conservation District. My work experience has always required diligent interaction with the public and private work sector, multiple County, State, and Federal agencies, NGO's, coworkers, and county residents. As the district manager I strive to ensure that the district utilizes Laramie County's tax dollars to enhance, restore and conserve natural resources across the county. Laramie County is experiencing growth and development like never before and the district is proud to accept the challenge of meeting this change while working to preserve native flora and fauna, maintain or enhance wildlife and range habitat, working to assist in ranching and farming operations and help to create water conservation practices.

I am a UW graduate with degrees in Wildlife and Range Management and secondary education with an emphasis on biology and natural resource conservation. I have spent the last 56 years living and working in Wyoming. I am constantly seeking to enjoy all the outdoor opportunities Wyoming has to offer with my wife Patty and daughter Sage. You can always find us hunting, fishing, and horse packing all over this awesome state or helping with various conservation projects and community participation such as Cheyenne Frontier Days, county and state fair, FFA/4H events, and other volunteer organizations. My family and I are proud to call Wyoming home. Go Pokes!
